

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

An amputated part holding apparatus has a contact member provided in a casing to define a particle charge chamber between the contact member and the casing. The contact member comes into pressing contact with an amputated part owing to increased pressure in the particle charge chamber. The chamber is charged with particles to generate pressing force. The amputated part holding apparatus is further provided with a particle supply unit including a particle charging device.